Bettors Last Year's Record Central Plays This

Traverse City's fifth place finish in the annual Michigan Central race was a surprise to many of the bettors who gathered in the city for the event. The race, which is held annually in May, is one of the most popular events in the city. This year's race was held at the Grand Traverse Hotel, and was won by a horse named "The Great" who was owned by a local businessman. The race was a close one, with several other horses finishing within a few lengths of the winner. The betting public was also active, with many bets being placed on the favorite. The race was a success for all concerned, and it is expected that next year's race will be even more exciting.
