Notre Dame Miler Gets The Cheers

NEW YORK (AP) — It had to be one of the strangest miles ever run.

Ed Dean tried to steal it, which would have ranked right up there with one of Willie Sutton's jobs. Jim Grelle just wanted to win it. And Jim Ryun, frankly didn't know what to do.

But Ryun, the leggy, 18-year-old Kansas freshman finally solved his dilemma by running his own race and holding off Grelle's famed finishing kick in a 4:02.2 effort in the New York Athletic Club's Indoor Games Friday night.

There was a scattering of boos when the time was announced, but a resounding cheer for Dean, a Notre Dame runner relatively unknown on the indoor circuit who finished dead last.

The crowd of 15,137 had been lured to Madison Square Garden by the promise of the first sub-four indoor mile in two seasons and the prospect of an indoor record half mile in the Bill Crothers-Tommy Farrell race.

Neither happened.

Russia's blonde Tatiana Schelkanova salvaged a little with a woman's indoor record broad jump of 21 feet 5½ inches, but Farrell pulled out of the half mile with an old leg ailment and Grelle and Ryun were too busy watching each other to break four.

Dean, running against this country's two best milers, barged out in front immediately, had a 10-yard lead on the field at the end of one lap, 40 yards after four turns around the 11-lap track and was leading by a quarter of a lap halfway through.

The rest of them were just jogging along in his wake as he cut out a 59.2 quarter, a 1:59.6 half and held a lead up to 80 yards until the last two laps. It looked like he was playing rabbit and no one cared, but that wasn't it at all.

"No, I wasn't going to be a rabbit," Dean said. "I thought they might tire each other out and I could steal it. I just wanted to go all out for three quarters and see what would happen."

What happened was that Ryun finally started running in the last two laps and just held off Grelle at the wire. Dean faded to last in the five-man field.

Crothers went for the record by himself, finishing easily in 1:50 flat — two-tenths off Farrell's mark. He also ran a 48.1 440-yard leg — fastest of the night — on a Toronto relay team and won the Mal Foote Award as the meet's outstanding athlete.

With Miss Schelkanova leading the way, the Russians won two of the three women's events. Tamara Dmitryeva took the 880 in 2:14.9 with victory by an eyelash over Marie Mulder. Francie Kraker of Ann Arbor was third in 2:15.6. Eleanor Montgomery of Tennessee A&I won the high jump on fewer misses at 5-6.

Of the five Russian men, only Igor Ter-Ovanesyan was a winner. He took the long jump at 26-5.

Katzenmeyer Is Main Speaker

Michigan Golf Coach Bert Katzenmeyer will be the main speaker at the Monday noon meeting of the University of Michigan Club of Ann Arbor at the Commons Building on North Campus. One of Michigan's basketball coaches will answer questions on today's game with Purdue.
