Old Cass Tech High, the downtown school without a facility of its own for outdoor track, had a big day in the sport Tuesday at Martin Luther King High.

Coaches Robert Glenn and Sandra Smith saw their boys and girls PSL champion squads respectively turn the new Public School League vs. Catholic League meet into a one-school show. Cass ran off with both titles in a meet which was completed despite a downpour midway through the festivities.

THE CASS boys' team, which has an outside chance of winning a state Class A title Saturday at Flint, rolled up 84 points to second place Central's 43. Mumford finished third with 37, one point ahead of Bishop Borgess from the Catholic League.

The girls team amassed 62 points to runnerup Mackenzie's 46 with Immaculata leading the Catholic League entries with 42 points.

The PSL won the meet despite the absence of Deon Hogan, the flashy Kettering sprinter, who decided to pass up the meet to prepare for Saturday's more important state championships.

But Marcus Allen of Cass Tech, the league's premier hurdler, was there. Allen won both the 330-yard low hurdles and 120-yard highs as Cass won six firsts despite the sloppy going.

DAVIDA BOOZER led

Cass's girls team winning the shot and finishing second to Mercy's Beth Bosse in the discus.

One of the meet's brightest stars was Mackenzie's Delisa Walton who turned in a double winning both the 440- and 880-yard runs.

Although Grosse Pointe North wasn't competing in this meet, the Norsemen of coach Tom Gauerke concluded another great season defeating Grosse Pointe South, 116½-30½, to rack up its 85th straight dual meet victory. North, too, is one of the favorites in Saturday's state championships.
